

Double Down The Drift: A Journey into the Lost Art of Drifting

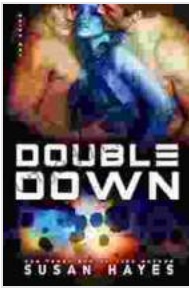

"Double Down The Drift" is an enthralling and visually mesmerizing documentary that takes viewers on a captivating journey into the adrenaline-fueled world of drifting, a thrilling and dangerous motorsport that pushes the limits of car control and human skill. Directed by acclaimed filmmaker Rory van Oost, the film immerses us in the lives of four elite drifters from different backgrounds and diverse personalities, each with their unique story to tell.

The Lost Art of Drifting

Drifting, a technique that involves intentionally oversteering a car, inducing a controlled slide, is a mesmerizing spectacle that requires a delicate balance of skill, precision, and calculated risk. In the past, drifting was considered a reckless and dangerous practice, but over time, it has evolved into a recognized motorsport with a dedicated following worldwide.

The Characters

"Double Down The Drift" introduces us to four passionate individuals who embody the spirit of drifting. There's Vaughn Gittin Jr., a flamboyant and charismatic American drifter known for his daring and technical prowess. We meet Fredric Aasbø, a Norwegian drifter with a cool and calculated style, who approaches the sport with a scientific precision. Chelsea DeNofa, a fearless and ambitious female drifter, brings a fresh perspective to the male-dominated world of drifting. And finally, Daigo Saito, a legendary Japanese drifter, known for his unmatched control and mastery of the art.
