

Public Actors in International Investment Law: European Yearbook of International Economic Law Volume 35

The European Yearbook of International Economic Law Volume 35 delves into the complex and evolving landscape of public actors' responsibilities and immunities in international investment law. This comprehensive volume provides a thorough analysis of the legal frameworks and practical challenges surrounding the interplay between public policy, investor rights, and the promotion of sustainable development.

State Responsibility and Sovereign Immunity

The Yearbook explores the fundamental principles of state responsibility and sovereign immunity in international investment law. It examines the distinction between jure imperii (sovereign acts) and jure gestionis (commercial acts) and analyzes the exceptions to sovereign immunity, including breaches of international obligations and commercial activities.

Expropriation and Fair and Equitable Treatment

The volume discusses the hotly contested issues of expropriation and fair and equitable treatment (FET). It examines the different interpretations of expropriation under international law and analyzes the standards of compensation and proportionality required in cases of expropriation. The Yearbook also delves into the concept of FET and its application to investment protection cases.

Public Interest and Sustainable Development

The Yearbook recognizes the growing importance of public interest and sustainable development in international investment law. It explores the legal frameworks that allow states to regulate in the public interest, including environmental protection, public health, and the promotion of social welfare. The volume also examines the tensions between investor rights and the pursuit of sustainable development objectives.

Case Studies and Comparative Perspectives

The European Yearbook of International Economic Law Volume 35 presents a wealth of case studies and comparative perspectives from around the world. It analyzes recent investment arbitration cases involving public actors and compares the approaches taken by different jurisdictions in addressing issues of state responsibility, expropriation, and FET.

This volume of the European Yearbook of International Economic Law is an invaluable resource for scholars, practitioners, and policymakers working in the field of international investment law. It provides a comprehensive overview of the legal frameworks and practical challenges surrounding public actors' responsibilities and immunities, contributing to a deeper understanding of the complex interplay between investment protection and the public interest in the global economy.
