Good vs. Evil

- The idea of good vs. evil is clearly shown in Macbeth from the beginning. The play starts with Macbeth being very loyal and brave and fighting for his country. However, when the three witches tell him that he will be king, the evil part of his mind takes over his good part and supported by his wife, Macbeth turns completely evil. The 'evil' witches do not tell Macbeth to murder anyone, but because Macbeth's evil part has taken over his conscience, he does not think of any other way except violence. Even when Macbeth wants to follow the path of good, Lady Macbeth calls him a coward and once again, evil takes over the good and Macbeth commits the murder. In the play, good and evil are always shown fighting together, and thus one of the main themes in Macbeth is good vs. evil.
